For the Cookbook

CAKE, PLAIN.

Oleo, 4 tablespoonfuls; sugar, 1 cup; eggs, 1; milk, 1 cup; flour, 3 cups; baking powder, 4 teaspoonfuls; vanilla, ½ teaspoonful. Total (cooked) 14 pieces. Serves 1-1 serving, 2 pieces.

Directions—Cream the oleo, add half the sugar and continue creaming. Beat egg till light and add with the milk and the rest of the sugar to the creamed oleo. Add flour mixed with baking powder. Flavor, beat well and bake in a shallow pan about half an hour.

The cake may be covered with a plain white icing made by putting two tablespoonfuls of boiling water in a bowl, adding a few drops of vanilla and stirring in gradually about 1 cup of powdered sugar. Spread on cake while it is still warm. This will raise the value of each serving of cake about 94 calories and will increase the cost $1.004 per portion, or a little more than 3 cents for the whole cake.

Peas, 2 cups; water, 16 cups; onion, ½; fat, 2 tablespoonfuls; salt and pepper, to season. Total (cooked) 4 cups. Serves 6-1 serving, 1 cup.

Directions—Look the peas over, wash and soak them in cold water over night. Pour off the water and put them in a kettle with 4 quarts of water and simmer slowly for 4 or 5 hours or until thoroughly cooked. Add more water during the cooking if necessary. (If not cooked enough the thick part will settle.) Cook the onion in butter or fat and strain into the soup, add salt and pepper to taste. Salt pork or sausage may be cooked in the soup if desired.

CODFISH BALLS.

Boneless salt fish, 2½ cups; potatoes, 4½ cups; egg, 1; oleo, 1 tablespoonful; pepper, to season. Total (cooked) 12 cakes. Serves 6-1 serving, 2 cakes.

Then drain off water, pick fish apart or cut in small pieces. Add fresh water and potatoes, washed, peeled and cut in cubes. Boil till potatoes are soft; drain, mash thoroughly, add egg, shortening, pepper and salt, if necessary. Beat well, shape in balls, sprinkle with flour and fry in hot fat or pork.

Tea Table Talks

By May De Witt Talmage

CONGENIALITY.

The term "women friends" has often been scoffed at. Yet the two women who seated themselves at a tea table for a quiet chat after a long separation, had been friends for many years.

"There is a place in my life that no one but you has ever occupied or ever can," said one. "When you are absent it is like a closed room waiting for its occupant."

"It is because we understand each other so thoroughly," replied the other. "There is not an iota of sham between us. You know me exactly as I am, for my genuine self, my faults, virtues, weaknesses, the same as I know you, so there would be no use for us to pretend anything. We have subtracted the pros from the cons in our lives and characters, and in spite of the fact that we are different in our beliefs and outlook on life, we are thoroughly congenial."

The dictionary says that congeniality is a matter of like temperament and characteristics, but it is more often the result of like experience. Experience reveals two different natures to each other that otherwise might have nothing in common. Take, for instance, two women of absolutely different temperaments and likes. They begin life with the same surroundings and often there springs up a bond of congeniality that no one can understand. If you stop to analyze it you may find it was mostly based on baby foods, contagious diseases, or mutual domestic problems.

Later in life they are separated by force of circumstances, and they live and progress along entirely different lines. When they meet again they are disappointed and surprised to find that the congeniality which they thought a stable article has been lost.

Congeniality must be based on more than mutual understanding or sympathy of any one phase of life to stand the test of time. It must go deeper than that, for environment and experience can change the entire thing.

Two women might start with similar characteristics and tastes. Put one in a peaceful home setting with husband and children, surrounded by love, interested in the peaceful things of life, and exempt from financial worries. The other woman's path diverges for lack of all this. One is like the quiet flocks feeding on the hillside, the other like a volcano ready to erupt at any moment. When they meet again after a long absence they are disappointed to find they are no longer congenial. Congenial, fundamentally, they might have been, but force of circumstances, every day living, has made them uncongenial. They no longer speak the same language.

When you find some one who can understand your soul's language, who can understand and see the perspective in your life, you should realize it is a rare and precious gift that has been given to you.
